FROM WASHINGTON.

Interesting Debates in Congress on the President's Message.

Ex-Gov. Floyd and Mr. Buchanan's Cabinet—How the New Compensation Bill Works—Judge Lecompte Removed, &c.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Daily Times

WASHINGTON, Monday, Dec. 8.

We had a spicy debate in the House to-day. Mr. CAMPBELL led off in a sharp, vigorous denunciation of the manner in which the President has seen fit to speak of the majority of the American people who have rebuked his Administration. He was interrupted several times by questions from Southern members, but gave them very telling, if not very satisfactory replies.

Mr. MCMULLEN, of Virginia, thought he had cornered him by three questions, put in succession; but was glad to quit soon at last. Mr. CAMPBELL asserted that not only were Fremont and Fillmore parties in the Northern States united in their hostility to Gen. Gen. PIERCE's Administration, but they were both outdone by the Buchanan men who proclaimed themselves better Free-State men than either of the others.

Mr. SHERMAN—one of the Investigating Committee,—made a good speech on the same side.

In the Senate you will notice from the report of the debate that Senator BIGLER, of Pennsylvania, who is supposed to possess the full confidence of Mr. BUCHANAN, declared, that while the people of Kansas would be allowed to settle the question of Slavery for themselves, the new President would prefer that Kansas should come in as a Free State. This declaration has not in the least encouraged or consoled the Southern men.

The galleries in both Houses were crowded to-day.

The action of the Virginia Electoral College informally presenting Ex-Gov. FLOYD's name to Mr. BUCHANAN's consideration, as that of the recipient of whatever position in the new Administration the 90,000 majority in that State is deemed entitled to, has cast dismay into the ranks of the Hunter and Mason factions, which, by this movement, are completely and effectually floored. It is scarcely probable that the President elect will fail to obey this edict from the "Old Dominion," and FLOYD may therefore be set down for one of the Departments, unless he should himself interpose some obstacle to that consummation. In no other way, probably, could Mr. HUNTER and his friends have been so irrevocably crowded off the course. He is a man of too much ability, and too much importance to the incoming Administration, to be voluntarily ignored, if he did oppose the nomination of Mr. BUCHANAN. The action of the Electoral College, however, solves the difficulty and "divides the honors" without weighing the new President with the responsibility.

The House is expected to elect a Chaplain this week. The present incumbent, Rev. DANIEL WALDO, of New-York, will be a candidate, and it is to be hoped a successful one. It will be remembered that he is ninety-five years of age, that he rendered good service to his country in the hour of her trial, and is, in fact, one of the few living links between the days of the Revolution and those of America's unbounded prosperity. His modest deportment, and eminent worth have made him many warm friends in all sections of the country.

The new Compensation Bill of last session is already exerting a wholesome influence on the House, bringing members here more promptly at the beginning of the session, and checking the disposition to pair off and be absent until "after the holidays," so common in years gone by. It will be remembered that under the new law a member has no right to charge compensation for days during which he is absent from the House. Of course every honorable man will see that the obligation of this penalty is just as heavy upon one who "pairs off" and remains here, but who thus binds himself to be absent whenever the vote is taken.

If gentlemen charge themselves, as in honor bound, with the penalty of these delinquencies, they certainly will generally be found in their seats. It is said that some members entirely disregarded this provision of the law last year, and, in settling their accounts, made little or no deductions, even though absent one-third or one-half the session. I know not how this is, but I understand that a minute of absenteeism is being kept this Winter, for comparison with the settlements next Spring, with a view of ascertaining and informing the public who are the men to be guilty of such shabbiness. I confess I do not believe there are many such.

The Republicans, without holding the caucus intended for to-night, have agreed to let the vote on the Whitfield case be taken to-morrow.

Judge LECOMPTE, of Kansas, has been removed by the President. A Committee of Marylanders had waited on the President to remonstrate against it, without avail.

JAMES O. HARRISON, of Kentucky, is understood to have been appointed instead. S.

The Dispatches from Gov. Geary—Another Duel Prevented.

WASHINGTON, Monday, Dec. 8.

The dispatches from Gov. GEARY, brought hither by a special messenger, have been officially acted on. The announcement that Judge LECOMPTE had been removed by the President, on Saturday, is premature, although such an event will probably soon take place.

Mr. BAGBY, who figured, recently, in the bloodless duel with Mr. IRVING, challenged Mr. HORNBY for his strictures, in the Richmond Enquirer, on the former's article—"A Virginia Editor"—in Harper's Magazine, and came hither to fight, but, mutual friends having settled the difficulty, the parties this evening returned to Virginia.

The Course of the Republicans in the Kansas-Delegate Case—The Return of Mr. Sumner to the Senate.

Special Correspondence of the N. Y. Daily Times.

WASHINGTON, Sunday, Dec. 7, 1856.

THE ADMISSION OF WHITFIELD.

On Tuesday the question of admitting WHITFIELD to his seat comes up again. The Republicans have been debating among themselves as to whether they had better fight off the vote, by a resort to Parliamentary tactics. This was the course of the Democracy throughout the first week of the session. Congress met at the time appointed by the Constitution. The question of validity of WHITFIELD's claim to be admitted as Delegate from Kansas, came up in the first hour of the session, as the whole country knew that it would come up. The Republicans were in their places, and had a majority. They voted against WHITFIELD's admission, upon the very simple ground that he claims to have been elected under the same law which the House last year decided to be invalid, and is therefore no more legally elected now than he was before.

Finding themselves in the minority in consequence of absenteeism,—notwithstanding the aid of several Know-Nothings, who last year voted against WHITFIELD—the Democrats under lead of Mr. PHELPS, of Missouri, resorted to a revolutionary proceeding, and by continual calls of the House, motions to adjourn, &c., &c., prevented the definitive question being taken, until their lagging members had arrived, and thus obtained a majority. That purpose is accomplished. They have the power now to put WHITFIELD in his seat, and they can do it whenever they can get the final vote, and the question is whether the Republicans shall follow the example of their adversaries, even though they have far greater excuse for so doing. Why should they? What is to be gained by it? Is there any probability that by so doing they can in the end prevent the wrong which will be consummated by WHITFIELD's admission? None whatever, unless it is determined to fight the question off through the session. That might be done by fifty determined men; but it would be at the expense of all legislation during the present session,—an evil of far greater magnitude, though no greater wrong, than the admission of the claimant from Kansas.

Such, I doubt not, will be the conclusions arrived at by the caucus. It certainly is better to submit to the infliction of the contemplated wrong, leaving its consequences and its perpetrators to the people,—and especially those men who last year voted against WHITFIELD, and who now so strangely stultify themselves, and condemn their own former course. Among these are HICKMAN, BROWN and THOM, of Pennsylvania; WILLIAMS, of New-York; MOORE and HARRISON, of Ohio, and what there is left of one WHITNEY. These make a change of fourteen on the vote of last year, in addition to which the Democracy have gained four by the elections to fill vacancies in Illinois, Missouri and Virginia.

MR. SUMNER'S REVIEW TO THE SENATE.

An Albany paper I perceive gives currency to the idea that Mr. SUMNER has no expectation of returning at all to his seat in the Senate,—that public life is not in accordance with his tastes, to which the pursuits of literature and science are more congenial—and that for these reasons he will abandon the Senate for the retirement of private life. I have reason to know that this statement is erroneous so far as Mr. SUMNER's purposes are concerned. It is true that he is not personally ambitious of public station, that literature, philosophy and science offer temptations to him far more pleasant than the thorny paths of political life. But the Senator from Massachusetts is an earnest man, as well as a scholar, and takes counsel of his duty rather than his selfishness. He feels that by a sacrifice of private ease to public service he is able to do something for the advancement of a great principle in behalf of which he has dared to risk even life itself, as well-remembered events have proved; and CHAS. SUMNER is not the man to abandon such an opportunity so long as his people choose him as a champion of freedom, and he can reasonably hope for renewed strength to bear up its standard. S.

XXXIVth Congress---Second Session.

SENATE.... WASHINGTON, Monday, Dec. 8.

STANDING COMMITTEES.

Mr. PEARCE submitted a list of Standing Committees which was adopted substantially the same as those of last session. Mr. PRATT is appointed on Foreign Relations instead of Mr. CHAVEZ, deceased. Mr. FOSTER on Public Lands supplies a similar vacancy. Mr. BRADBURY Commerce, instead of Mr. HAMLIN.

CHAPLAIN.

On motion of Mr. CLAY's resolution was adopted, that two Chaplains of different denominations shall be elected, who shall interchange weekly. Rev. STEPHEN P. HILL, a Baptist Minister of Washington, was elected.

THE PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE—MOTION TO PRINT.

The Senate resumed the consideration of the motion to print extra copies of the President's Message and accompanying documents.

Mr. BIGLER said that the Opposition Senators had condemned the President for speaking in harsh terms of the people of the Free States; but at the same time, in their strictures on him, they had fallen into the very practice which they condemn. The Senator from Maine (Mr. FESSENDEN) had spoken of the President as an unworthy son of a Free State; and the Senator from Ohio (Mr. WADE) had used terms still more severe, but such things were not uncommon. Very many teachers in morals and religion had utterly failed in practicing the maxims which they lay down for others. The right of the President to speak on the subject of Slavery as he had done was clear, and Senators had an undoubted right to criticize his opinions in a proper manner.

Mr. BIGLER could not admit that the course of the President was unprecedented, as has been alleged by the opposition Senators. General JACKSON, in one of his messages, discussed the question of the United States Bank in such a manner as to correct the misrepresentations of his political opponents, and President POLK had discussed the subject of the Mexican war in much the same manner. It was not only the right, but the duty of the President to inform Congress of the state of the Union, and entertaining the views that the present Executive does regarding the dangerous tendency and doctrines of certain political parties in the country, the obligation on him to communicate his opinions to Congress and the country became imperative. Senators might scout and discard the reasoning of that document as they please, but they should remember that President WASHINGTON, even on his early day, felt required to warn the people against the dangerous tendencies of geographical parties in our country, and efforts to array one section against the other. THOMAS JEFFERSON compared sectional agitation to the startling ring of the fire bell in the night. He acknowledged that the criticism of the action of a large class of his fellow-citizens by the President was a most delicate task, and should only be performed on great occasions—but in this instance the President has confined the severity of his strictures to partisan leaders—those who seek political power and place at the hazard of the peace of the country. He was confident the people would regard that rebuke as well deserved. Now that the present Chief Magistrate was near the close of his official career, and when the motives of the speaker could not be misunderstood, he would express the opinion, that time and experience would prove the wisdom of the measures of this Administration, and the day was not far in the future when the purity and patriotism of the President would be acknowledged by all. Some Senators had undertaken to determine what questions had been settled by the result of the late elections, and had taken exception to the definition which had been given by the President in his Message. One important fact which had been settled by the late election was, that BUCHANAN and BRECKINRIDGE would be President and Vice President for the next four years, and another fact still more important was, that the principles of the Democratic Party, as enunciated at Cincinnati and expounded by Mr. BUCHANAN, the most prominent feature being that the people of the States going into the Territories shall enjoy the right to determine the character of their own local institutions in their own way, including that of domestic Slavery. These principles were to be in the ascendency till 1861. Still another fact had been settled, namely: the modern and miscalled Republican Party, against which the Democracy had contended, had been found in the minority in twenty-three out of thirty-one States, and been repudiated in the Union by a majority of one million three hundred thousand votes, leaving that party in a minority larger than all the votes cast for their candidate. The Know-Nothing party had been repudiated in thirty out of thirty-one States by a popular vote of over two millions. The Senators on the other side seem to be so little satisfied with these results that they have not generally examined the figures. They claim eleven States, while they have a majority in only eight. He proceeded to show that the Democratic Party is national, while the Republican Party was sectional. In the course of his remarks he was interrupted by Mr. WADE, who asked whether Mr. BUCHANAN was in favor of making Kansas a Free State.

Mr. BIGLER replied, he presumed that the views of Mr. BUCHANAN were those of the Democracy generally. He was for allowing the people of a Territory or State to make their own institutions to suit themselves, but like most Northern people, if he could have his choice, he would prefer it to be a Free State.

Mr. WADE further inquired whether Mr. BUCHANAN believed the people in their Territorial state have power to admit or exclude Slavery at their own will.

Mr. BIGLER replied, he could not speak on that point for Mr. BUCHANAN, but was perfectly willing to give his own views on that question. He was of opinion that the people, through their local legislature, had that power—so far, however, as this involved the constitutional question, the Senate had no power to decide it, and individual opinions were of little consequence. He commented on Mr. DUNN's bill of last session as extending Slavery.

Mr. TRUMBULL endeavored to get the floor, to correct what he considered a misrepresentation, but Mr. BIGLER declined giving way, and it interfered, he said, with the continuity of his arguments.

Mr. BIGLER, in the course of his speech, said he did not like the Barnwell Rhett school of politicians, who talk so flippantly about a dissolution of the Union, as if it had cost nothing, and as if that event would remedy the evils of which they complain. He, however, had great admiration for those Southern statesmen who declare they will stay in the Union only in the position of equals.

Mr. COLLAMER obtained the floor, but yielded to Mr. TRUMBULL, who gave his views of Mr. DUNN's bill, replying to Mr. BIGLER, and maintaining that the proviso therein which declared that no person should be enumerated by virtue of not, was a very different thing from a provision to extend Slavery. In alluding to the arrangement of the Standing Committees, he said he thought injustice had been done to the Republicans. The Committee on Indian Affairs consisted wholly of Southern men, and on none of the important Committees was there a single member of the Republican Party. Adjourned.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

WASHINGTON, Monday, Dec. 8.

THE PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE—INTERESTING DISCUSSION.

The President's annual message was read.

Mr. CAMPBELL moved that it be referred to the Committee of the Whole on the State of the Union. He regretted the document as one of the most extraordinary ever emanating from an Executive. It was, in his opinion, a budget of misrepresentations, containing serious charges against a large portion of the people of the North, which have no foundation whatever in fact, which he could prove. Nearly four years ago the President was inaugurated into the office, and announced to the people of the country the repose which the Union then enjoyed relative to Slavery on the measures of 1850, saying it should receive no shock during his official term. Yet the first session of Congress had scarcely begun before the President, through his friends in this Hall, sought by all the means at his command to repeal the time-honored Compromise of 1820. The pretext was that it was necessary to enable the people of Nebraska and Kansas to enjoy the principles of the Compromise Measures of 1850. That repeal was carried, and the repose which so long blessed the country, disturbed, and an excitement unequaled in the history of the past was forced on it by his first official act. His influence, and the Union shaken to its very centre. Now he is retiring from office, he arraigns a vast majority of the people of the Free States as guilty of making war on the Constitutional rights of the South. The President had been condemned by a majority of three hundred thousand freemen.

Mr. HUNT inquired whether Mr. CAMPBELL took the Fremont and Fillmore vote together to make up that majority.

Mr. CAMPBELL replied affirmatively.

Mr. HUNT asked whether he regarded the supporters of Mr. FILLMORE at the North as Anti-Nebraska and in favor of Free-Soilism.

Mr. CAMPBELL thought there was not a single member of this House belonging to the Fillmore party of the North who did not, when before the people, oppose the principles of the Nebraska Bill, and he ventured to say that there was not one man out of every hundred who supported Mr. FILLMORE who did not oppose the repeal of the Missouri Compromise. They condemned Squatter Sovereignty as defended by the Buchanan party of the North. This party in that section assumed that it was more reliable than either the Fillmore or Fremont party.

A VOICE—That is so.

Mr. CAMPBELL—It claimed to be in favor of Freedom to Kansas, and that those who voted for Mr. DUNN's bill had voted to legalize and perpetuate Slavery in Kansas, arguing, at the same time, by the terms of the Nebraska Bill, Slavery was excluded from that Territory.

Mr. MCMULLEN—I desire to propound three questions.

Mr. CAMPBELL—One at a time, if you please.

Mr. MCMULLEN—First—Did not the gentleman's party in the Free States charge on the Southern portion of this confederacy a design to carry Slavery into Kansas, and if necessary, that they would do it at the point of the bayonet?

Mr. CAMPBELL—We not only made the charge, but proved it.

A VOICE FROM THE REPUBLICAN SIDE—That's a fact.

Mr. MCMULLEN—If you take the testimony of your packed Committee you could prove it. I would now ask, did not the Fremont Party support Mr. BUCHANAN as a Pro-Slavery man, who, if elected, would favor the establishment of Slavery in the Free States?

Mr. CAMPBELL—I can speak for myself. I was actively engaged in the canvass. I did charge Mr. BUCHANAN with being Pro-Slavery, and that the Platform on which he stood and sacrificed his individuality was Pro-Slavery. It looked not merely to the extension of Slavery to all the Territories, through the Nebraska Bill, but for the acquisition of Slave Territory.

Mr. MCMULLEN—Did not you and your party represent that Slaveholders owning five negroes were entitled to and cast three votes? [Laughter.]

Mr. CAMPBELL—I did not. Under the distribution of political power five Slaves in the South were equal to three votes in the Free States. Does the gentleman desire the proposition?

Mr. MCMULLEN inquired whether free negroes did not vote in Mr. CAMPBELL's district, or something to that effect.

Mr. CAMPBELL—I believe one negro vote was given in my district. That was cast by a man who was not authorized to do so under a decision of the court, and he voted for my opponent. [Laughter.]

Mr. CAMPBELL sent to the Clerk's desk a paper, which was read, signed by the person just referred to, named ANDERSON, claiming the right of suffrage because, among other things, he was three-quarters white, the remainder being made up of African and Indian blood, and further that his father was a brother of Ex-Governor WILSON SHANNON. [Excessive laughter.]

Mr. GIDDINGS called his colleague to order for casting an imputation on a colored constituent, by representing a brother of WILSON SHANNON to be his father. [Renewed merriment.]

Mr. CAMPBELL—My colleague will please excuse me. I was driven to the necessity of referring to this fact by the number of questions propounded. Let the gentlemen on the other side decide whether the SHANNONS are white men or not. [Laughter.]

Mr. MCMULLEN—The gentleman had arraigned Mr. VAN BUREN for having introduced Negro testimony. I want to know how the gentleman can exculpate himself by such testimony.

Mr. CAMPBELL—I know the character of this man ANDERSON, and, with all respect to gentlemen, I would as soon take his word as that of—[after a pause]—any man on this floor.

Mr. FLORENCE did not see what application these proceedings had to the number of copies of the President's Message to be printed. [Laughter.]

Mr. CLINGMAN expressed a hope that a rambling discussion would not be engaged in at this time. He was anxious to proceed with other business. There would be ample opportunity hereafter for debate.

Mr. HOUSTON, after what he charged as violations by Mr. CAMPBELL of the usages of the House, thought the debate ought to be allowed to proceed.

Mr. GROW rose to a point of order, insisting that this discussion was irrelevant.

Mr. CLINGMAN thought it extraordinary that the gentleman from Pennsylvania had made that discovery; and moved the previous question, which was not sustained.

Mr. SHERMAN said that on the first day of the session the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. PHELPS) introduced a question relative to Mr. WHITFIELD's seat, once judicially determined; and before this was disposed of, the Democrats procrastinating, the President had sent in his message. The President not only arraigned by unfounded accusations the party which his Administration brought into existence, but sought to defend himself by attributing to that party purposes which they did not entertain. He charged them with—while pretending to prevent the spread of Slavery—a desire to change the existing institutions of the States, thus accusing that party of false pretences. Those charged with this are expected to listen patiently, and not open their mouths in reply. The Republican Party are conservative men of influence in the North who stood by the Compromise of 1850. Many States gave Fremont majorities unprecedentedly large. This charge of false pretences was unfounded. The Republicans did not propose nor wish to interfere with the relations of the whites and the blacks in the Southern States. They never claimed the power to do it. The President imputes that which is unfounded. They claim that in violation of the pledges made, and for political purposes, the Missouri Compromise was repealed; and now they were called on to submit to what their honor and sense of justice declared to be wrong. The Republican Party would not have been in existence, but for the acts of the President, who prepared the population of Kansas for civil war, by meeting out injustice to their reasonable demands. The Republican Party only ask to have the Slavery question put where the President found it as to Territories.

The Democratic Party, by overthrowing PIERCE and DOUGLAS, had put a seal of condemnation on the Kansas-Nebraska act, and by bringing forward Mr. BUCHANAN, who had not been complicated with it, they evaded the question. The Democrats of Ohio and Indiana advocated "BUCHANAN, BRECKINRIDGE, and Free Kansas." In these States they evaded and avoided the question of the repeal of the Missouri Compromise, by declaring that matter of no political importance, and that Mr. BUCHANAN was nominated against the combined vote of PIERCE and DOUGLAS, and that he repudiated that law, and further, that Mr. BUCHANAN would make Kansas a Free State. In conclusion he said he was opposed to agitation, and characterized the Democratic Party as sectional.

NEWS FROM MEXICO AND TEXAS—DEATH OF MAJOR LALLY—EARTHQUAKE.

BALTIMORE, Monday, Dec. 8.

New-Orleans papers of Tuesday of last week are to hand. They contain Vera Cruz dates of the 16th ult. The state of siege at Puebla still continued, without any decisive results. Communication with the Capital and interior had been almost entirely suspended.

The advices from Galveston, Texas, are to the 29th

[illegible]

[illegible] years ago has undoubtedly a great share in the fabrication of literature. Though not so productive, perhaps, of works of genius as in the earlier portion of the century, it is the more [illegible] receptive in appreciating them when they do appear. If authors are less numerous, readers in any case, are more philosophical. Here, for instance, is a poem of many thousand lines in blank verse, which, placed alongside of the best [illegible] of fifteen years ago, deadened, almost as a matter of course, with that ill-received production [illegible]. The fatal necessity for having [illegible] unlike Milnerve, upon an age too [illegible] of killing the consumer of his great heart-work [illegible] the critical and literary of its contemporaries for his surpassing the cautious and timid [illegible] of numbers—this injustice [illegible] to be regarded as temporary. If the age is barren, [illegible] that it is just. But it is not [illegible] that it has given birth to such productions in literature as Jane Eyre, Pendennis, Eliot Warburton, and Aurora Leigh. There is a new atmosphere in these writings, which our fathers breathed but a stray breath of it got into their [illegible]. Had Aurora Leigh would have [illegible] incontinently [illegible] (Yet they were not [illegible] delicate or refined people, and [illegible] have the language of Patria [illegible]. Mrs. Browning is both delicate and [illegible]. Woman-nature was grave [illegible] in the tactics tests the lonely [illegible] of any and doubtless extremestic a hero in [illegible], a poetic who practised to carry [illegible] with him beside his pack—his soul [illegible]. As if a poetess could have a sentiment [illegible] of an association. Mrs. Browning, the [illegible] poet of the poetic female mind of [illegible] present days or of past—no rash [illegible] bold experimenter on the tolerance of the [illegible] century of England and America in the person of [illegible] daughter, of a parentage of vice and [illegible] sorrow, the victim of unmeasured [illegible]—yet the fruitful stock of human and [illegible] virtue. Will any critic feel himself [illegible] upon to revise the old conventionalisms and [illegible] shocking—positively shocking [illegible] of literature?

[illegible] Aurora Leigh is a novel in verse, if you will, or [illegible] of modern philosophy if you prefer it, or a [illegible] of pictures in literature and art.

As a novel, the incidents are subordinate to its [illegible]; yet it has action sufficient to keep the general reader [illegible]. The "particular" will not [illegible] unconsciously awake through ten thousand [illegible] of [illegible], and more than less of [illegible] verse. This medium is, of itself, a [illegible]. Pure, simple, lively, flexible, it is as [illegible] as its living open can command in [illegible]. We know of none which approaches it in easy grace. Rossetti's lines not [illegible], but are cast in the mold lying about which [illegible]. Barry Cornwall has a [illegible] in his dramatic writings. The [illegible] and progress of one of its [illegible] rivulets. Nothing [illegible] more tender or delicate or simple, in its [illegible] than the same verse in the narrative pieces of Tennyson. But none of these [illegible] guide Browning with a freer rein than the [illegible] of Aurora Leigh. How exquisite [illegible] the rare music Amount measure and bears the [illegible] in its humble movement! Leigh, by [illegible] to be spelled in the pronunciation, as if [illegible]

The story is briefly this: Aurora is the offspring of an English gentleman of wealth, who [illegible] in love with and marries a fair Italian girl. Whom he first sees in a priestly procession in Florence. The mother dies in her daughter's infancy, and the parents' fond tenderness in childhood [illegible] her father is a mountain home in Tuscany, where with his death. The proud, passionate, sensitive child of the South, an orphan, passes to the tutelage of a maiden aunt in [illegible], whose sons had been put out of joint by the marriage,—a character admirably drawn, not a caricature, but, though a cramped, grizzled [illegible] of society, with allowance of human emotion. As one of several highly felicitous female portraitures sprinkled through the volume, and which bear marks like a sculptor's ideals of a close intimacy with real originals, we may present the first outline of this portrait to the reader:

I think I see my father's sister stand
Upon the hall step of her country-house
To welcome me. She stood straight and calm,
[illegible] narrow forehead braided tight
[illegible] of deep thoughts
[illegible] pulses; brown hair pricked with grey
[illegible] of life, (she was not old,
For my father's elder by a year,)
[illegible] dress, simply, yet in delicate lines;
[illegible] hands, as fine as my own are,
The ends, through speaking unrequited loves,
Or perdiverture nigwardly half-truths:
Eyes of no color,—once they might have smiled,
But never, never have wept themselves
In smiling, cheeks in which was yet a rose
Of perished summers, like a rose in a book,
Preserved for rare state pleasure,—if past bloom,
Then fading also.

She had lived, we'll say,
A barren life, which was not life at all,
But only as she had and lived enough to know
Between the vicar and the county squires,
[illegible] sometimes
Upon the empyreal, to secure their souls
Against chance vagabonds, and, in the abyss,
The apothecary looked on once a year,
To prove their soundness of humility.
The poor she visited her Christian gifts
Of clothes and broth, not stinting patronage,
Nursing of sick, and teaching children all
Her own accomplishments, with a proper sense
Of difference in the quality—and still
The book-club, guarded from any modern trick
Of thinking dangerous entities from the crease,
Preserved her intellectual. She had lived
A sort of cage-bird life, born in a cage,
Accounting that to leap from perch to perch
Was out and joy enough for any bird.
Poor heaven, how silly are the things that live
By rhythm, and not metre!

How distinctly this frozen lady is painted, as [illegible] in her frigid atmosphere as Hogarth's [illegible] in the Winter point of Morning.

It is evident that the warm Italian nature of Aurora will be fully congealed by this northern [illegible]. Her death is of course in danger of be[illegible] in the conventionalisms and so-called [illegible] English,—and for that [illegible] routine of female [illegible]. But matters had got the start of the [illegible] she was wayward to save some [illegible] herself. She has a lover, too, [illegible] Romney Leigh—who is, by [illegible] a very attractive sort of hero—a [illegible], but a calculating moralist, a kind [illegible], a utilitarian philanthropist, [illegible] but unpleasant. A [illegible] would have saved [illegible] through life. The better [illegible] Romney and his schemes, the [illegible] Romney's. His first mistrust [illegible] the hand of the fair Aurora; his soul [illegible] of the masterly of his own [illegible] for active impulses. His head is too much for his heart. Thirdly, it must be admitted [illegible] that this attachment [illegible] for her cousin. She rejects [illegible] of the aunt, who suddenly [illegible] shortly after, a will [illegible] of positive means.

The death of the aunt is a powerful sketch of tragic emotion, resulting to us somewhat in its [illegible] of the trick.

The conceit of the story may be readily anticipated—Lady [illegible] in the [illegible] and [illegible] even the [illegible] over the [illegible] count much in the working out the [illegible] of the philosopher, that a little more nature and less restraint would have produced better practical results; while the lady has learned in the school of experience, has found the superior of literature, and [illegible] and [illegible] of genius as she is acquiescent in the attainable results.

There is a remarkable similarity, by the way, in the use made in an incident in Jane Eyre—in the blindness of Rochester. The reader will recall the same disaster—happening in each case too at the conflagration of the owner's dwelling—to Mr. Rochester, and its corresponding appeal to the sympathies of Currer Bell's heroine.

In this glance at a portion of the outline of a large volume, we have but feebly indicated its pervading interest, which is that of thoughtful profound reflection on the problems of society and individual life. In these Mrs. Browning is no visionary, nor is she that terrible thing, a dilettante professor in petticoats. She has much to say—says it at times with a fullness which requires some patience on the part of the reader anxious to get on with the narrative; but the whole is couched in so pure and elegant an expression, is relieved by so frequent playfulness and pathos—by such vivid touches of the imagination—that it will attract again and again.

It would be doing the reader injustice not to present a few of the numerous exquisite detachable passages in the book. Here is a bit of charming feminine gracefulness, in a sentiment too delicate for a masculine pen—Motherhood in its charge of Infancy:

Women know
The way to rear up children, (to be just,)
They know a simple, merry, tender knack
Of tying sashes, fitting baby-shoes,
And singing pretty words that make no sense,
And kissing full sense into empty words;
Which things are normals to out life upon,
Although such trifles: children learn by such,
Love's holy earnest in a pretty play,
And get not over early solemnized.—
But seeing, as in a rose-bush, Love's Divine,
Which burns and hurts not,—not a single bloom,—
Become aware and unafraid of Love.
Such good do mothers. Fathers love as well
—Mine did, I know,—but still with heavier brains,
And wills more consciously responsible,
And not as wisely, since less foolishly;
So mothers have God's license to be unused.

Another, not wholly unlike—A Girl's Blush:

Girls blush, sometimes, because they are alive,
Half wishing they were dead to save the shame.
The sudden blush devours them, neck and brow:
They have drawn too near the fire of life, like moats,
And flare up bodily, wings and all. What then?
Who's sorry for a gnat—or girl?

I blushed,
I feel the brand upon my forehead now
Strike hot, sear deep, as guiltless men may feel
The felon's iron, say, and scorn the mark
Of what they are not. Most illogical,
Irrational nature of our womanhood,
That blushes one way, feels another way,
And prays, perhaps, another! After all,
We cannot be the equal of the male,
Who rules his blood a little.

There are many descriptions of scenery, rare glimpses of England, France and Italy. This of a London fog strikes us as eminently forcible and original:

Or I saw
Fog only, the great tawny weltering fog,
Involve the passive city, strangle it
Alive, and draw it off into the void,
Spires, bridges, streets, and squares, as if a sponge
Had wiped out London,—or as noon and night
Had clapped together and utterly struck out
The intermediate time, undoing themselves
In the act. Your city posts see such things,
Not despicable. Mountains of the South,
When, drunk and mad with elemental wines,
They rend the seamless mist and stand up bare,
Make fewer singers, haply. No one sings,
Descending Sinai; on Parnassus mount,
You take a mule to climb, and not a muse,
Except in fable and figure: forests chant
Their anthems to themselves, and leave you dumb.
But sit in London, at the day's decline,
And view the city parish in the mist,
Like Pharaoh's armaments in the deep Red Sea,—
The chariots, horsemen, footmen, all the host,
Sucked down and choked to silence—then, surprised
By a sudden sense of vision and of tune,
You feel as conqueror, though you did not fight,
And you and Israel's other singing girls,
Ay, Miriam with them, sing the song you choose.

There is nothing in Cowper or Wordsworth more touching than this picture of a hospital, with the reflections of its inmate, Marian, of the tale:

She stirred—the place seemed new and strange as death.
The white strait bed, with others strait and white,
Like graves dug side by side, as measured lengths,
And quiet people walking in and out
With wonderful low voices and soft steps,
And apparitional equal care for each,
Astonished her with order, silence, law:
And when a gentle hand held out a cup,
She took it, as you do at sacrament,
Half awed, half melted,—not being used, indeed,
To so much love as makes the form of love
And courtesy of manners. Delicate drinks
And rare white bread, to which some dying eyes
Were turned in observation. O my God,
How sick we must be, ere we make men just!
I think it frets the saints in heaven to see
How many desolate creatures on the earth
Have learnt the simple dues of fellowship
And social comfort, in a hospital,
As Marian did. She lay there, stunned, half tranced,
And wished, at intervals of growing sense,
She might be sicker yet, if sickness made
The world so marvelous kind, the air so hushed,
And all her wake-time quiet as a sleep;
For now she understood, (as such things were,)
How sickness ended very oft in heaven,
Among the unspoken raptures. Yet more sick,
And stranger happy. Then she dropped her lids,
And, folding up her hands as for a bath at night,
Would lose no moment of the blessed time.

We might extend these passages freely and add those of a different character—our copy is abundantly pencilled for the purpose. But we forbear. Aurora Leigh is a prominent book of the season, and is worthy of universal acceptation. The exquisitely-toned music in this author, the elevation and pathos, the joy and sorrow of this richly-gifted nature:—it is no mean spirit by which they are worthily accepted.

Aurora Leigh has an autobiographic interest, not in its adventures, but in its sentiment. It is in a great measure "the history of an individual mind." Indeed the author calls attention to this phase of the work in the dedication to her accomplished "cousin and friend," the poet John Kenyon, when she writes of the poem as "the most mature of my works, and the one into which my highest convictions upon Life and Art have entered." There are portions of it which apparently reflect with accuracy personal experiences of the author in her early life, as her later residence at Florence supplies numerous local traits of feeling and description. Not that Mrs. Browning has incurred the trials in the world of her Aurora or Marian. These are but the machinery of passion. The soul is common to us all, with its heritage of the woes and joys of all the race. The biographic arrangement of the puppets is of secondary importance. Aurora's history we have seen; Mrs. Browning's is simple, perhaps hardly less remarkable. Born in London of a wealthy family, her early development was extraordinary in sensibility and poetic cultivation and learned application. She began writing, we are told, at ten, and at fifteen her powers were acknowledged by her friends. Oxford has turned out few better Grecians, at least in the heart of the matter, than was Elizabeth Barrett. Her first published volume, An Essay on Mind, with other Poems, is dated 1826. Probably the writer was then about seventeen, the author of a metaphysical poem which might be valued higher if the author had not herself so greatly elevated the standard by which to measure her own productions. The few poems added give early evidence of that charm of enthusiasm, delicacy and pathos, the essential spirits of Love, which have never deserted the pen of the author. "Weep," she sings:

Weep, as it rose through grief!
Weep, as it was wept after!
Pierce your pleasures to your woes;
And think, life's given well worth its rose.

Then came, in 1838, Prometheus Bound, translated from the Greek of Æschylus, and Miscellaneous poems, by the Translator. The translation is neither only critically learned, but exquisite [illegible] the trick.

The conceit of the story may be readily anticipated—Lady [illegible] in the [illegible] and [illegible] even the [illegible] over the [illegible] count much in the working out the [illegible] of the philosopher, that a little more nature and less restraint would have produced better practical results; while the lady has learned in the school of experience, has found the superior of literature, and [illegible] and [illegible] of genius as she is acquiescent in the attainable results.

There is a remarkable similarity, by the way, in the use made in an incident in Jane Eyre—in the blindness of Rochester. The reader will recall the same disaster—happening in each case too at the conflagration of the owner's dwelling—to Mr. Rochester, and its corresponding appeal to the sympathies of Currer Bell's heroine.

Board of Aldermen.

The Board of Aldermen met last evening—President WILSON, President, in the Chair.

[illegible]

A communication from the Croton Aqueduct Department was received, and ordered to be printed. [illegible] plan for 1855. The title to the Croton Lake property having been acquired, the Board had only await the action of the Legislature, [illegible] to be able to proceed with the work. [illegible] the estimates for this purpose is limited by the [illegible] their issue to 5 per cent. [illegible] the same at rates can be effected. [illegible] at their session (says the communication) such increase in the interest as will enable the Comptroller to make available sale of the stocks by March next, the Board would be able to [illegible] the work under contract immediately [illegible] would probably be able to get it so well [illegible] during the year as to require say $500,000 [illegible] the present. The following are the estimates [illegible] the year: Croton water-work [illegible] $100,100; Aqueduct repairs and improvements, [illegible]; water pipe, &c., laying, $91,300; [illegible] and cleaning, $54,000; salaries, $24,000. Total, $[illegible].

[illegible] FROM THE UNION FERRY COMPANY.

The following communication from the Union Ferry Company was presented by Alderman FOX, Chairman of the Committee on Ferries.

To the Honorable the Mayor and Aldermen and Commonalty of the City of New-York:

The memorial of the Union Ferry Company of Brooklyn respectfully represents that the Roosevelt-street Ferry is comparatively a useless ferry, and is now [illegible] pecuniary loss. That said ferry crosses the slips of two other ferries, and thereby endangers the safety of passengers. Your memorialists are of opinion that the boats can be withdrawn therefrom without injury to the public interest. Your memorialists have been reluctantly but necessarily compelled to which resolution, as one of the essential means to protect the interests of the ferries, so as to [illegible] the stockholders of the Company from ultimate loss; but your memorialists are willing to comply with the generally expressed wishes of citizens by ceasing to commutation, if your honorable body will sanction the withdrawal of the said Roosevelt-street Ferry. And your memorialists as in duty bound will ever pray.

H. E. MORRIS, President.

BROOKLYN, Dec. 5, 1854.

The communication was referred to the Committee on Ferries.

THE METROPOLITAN GAS COMPANY.

The Report of the Committee on Lamps and Gas, now concurring to grant permission to the Metropolitan Gas Company to lay down mains in the streets, was adopted.

THE BELGIAN REVENUE.

The Report of the Committee on Repairs and Supplies, in favor of directing the Comptroller to make no further payments to the Belgian Revenue for paving Chatham-street, payments to Barry with Belgian for paving [illegible] until the same had been done according to the specifications, was adopted.

THE ASSESSORS' INVESTIGATION.

Resolved, That a special committee of three be appointed to examine into the condition of the books and affairs of the office of the Commissioner of Stocks and Loans, and also of any bureau in said department, with full power to send for books and persons and papers, to ascertain whether or not parties in the employ of the Corporation are interested in any manner in the taking of dirt and refuse from the streets, or with any parties having any contracts of any description with the Corporation, and report the whole facts [illegible] and responsibilities of the said department.

The resolution was adopted, and referred to the following Special Committee—Aldermen VALENTINE, FULMER and McCONNEY.

THE NEW RESERVOIR.

The report of the Finance Committee concurring with the Board of Councilmen, on a communication from the Comptroller, in relation to an application to the Legislature for an amendment to the act for the new Reservoir, was adopted.

The Board voted to concur with the Councilmen to have the stone cleaned by contract, in accordance with the specifications, published some time ago, in the Committee's report. The following was the vote—[illegible]

After passing upon some additional papers from the Board of Councilmen, the Board adjourned to Thursday.

Board of Councilmen.

The Board met on Monday evening, the President, Mr. F. PECKHAM, Esq., in the Chair.

A petition was presented, on the part of J. J. Bell, for permission to pave Wall-street, between Nassau and William, with Berr stone, he having made the necessary arrangements with the property-holders. Referred.

A petition of Engine Company No. 39, to have moneys returned to them, expended for room-hire, and not refunded, was entered, to pave Bleecker-street with Belgian pavement.

The Report of the Committee on Streets, amending a resolution of the Board of Aldermen, and in favor of allowing the Eighth-Avenue Railroad Company to run in the curb and gutter stones of Vesey (south side) five feet, was laid over.

The Report of the Committee on Markets in favor of advertising for a location for a market on the North River, between Fourteenth and Twenty-third streets, was referred to the Committee of the Whole.

A preamble was similarly referred, the object of which was to pave Battery-place from Broadway to the Hudson River.

The Board confirmed the contract for filling in certain sunken lots on Forty-first-street, between Tenth and Eleventh avenues.

The Report of the Committee on Assessments in favor of confirming assessment list for paving Sixty-fourth-street, between Second and Third avenues, was confirmed, as well as were also several other reports and resolutions.

The report to go into Committee of the Whole [illegible] was then put and carried by a vote of 24 to 23.

Adjourned to Wednesday.

The Board of Supervisors.

The Board of Supervisors met yesterday afternoon, Supervisor EAY in the Chair. The first matter of interest was the presentation of a bill from A. T. Stewart & Co., amounting to $149 67, for carpeting and oil-cloth for the Court-room of the Common Pleas. The bill declared its interest from the fact that, on a previous occasion, the Committee on Civil Courts, visiting a Court-room at $1 25 per yard for similar carpeting, Supervisor TUCKER found fault with the bill rendered by the Committee, who claimed that the article could not be bought at a lower price. When it became necessary to furnish the Common Pleas room, the Committee, by way of testing the truth of Mr. Tucker's declaration, had him appointed a Committee of One, to furnish it. According to the bill, the honest Alderman succeeded in procuring a like material for $1 05 per yard, 20 cents per yard less than was paid by the regular Committee.

A communication was received from the Recorder and City Judge, asking an interpreter of German for their Criminal Courts, [illegible]

The Board decided to increase the salary of the [illegible] of the Superior Court, from $700 to $800 per annum. The Board then adjourned to Thursday.

Seventh Presbyterian Church.

This church was [illegible] for public worship yesterday, after having been closed for more than four months. During [illegible] it has been entirely remodeled. Every part of the interior has been altered to suit the demands of a cultivated taste. The fresco work is appropriate and chaste. The pulpit is capacious, and elegantly [illegible]. The pews are as comfortable as can possibly be desired. In a word, everything has been done on a liberal scale, and with intelligent views of what is due to the House of God, and to the wants of a congregation.

The brightness of the Sabbath was a fitting symbol of the feeling of this people on entering a sanctuary [illegible] to them by so many associations. The church was thronged.

The opening sermon was preached by the Pastor, Rev. E. The Temperance Legislation.

Two years ago the Maine Law was a leading topic of public interest in this State. At the previous session of the Legislature a stringent law, prohibiting the sale of all intoxicating liquors, had been enacted and vetoed by Gov. SEYMOUR. The issue thus made entered into the Fall campaign of 1854. The Whigs nominated for Governor the man who, as Chairman of the Senate Committee on Temperance, had reported the bill; the Democrats renominated the Governor who had vetoed it. The result was the election of a Prohibitory Executive and of a decided majority in each branch of the Legislature favorable to prohibition. It was regarded as a Maine Law victory; and at the Session of 1855 a Prohibitory law was passed, identical in all its leading features with that of the previous year. Feeling their strength, the supporters of the prohibitory policy determined to exert it. They were for using all their power. The sale of intoxicating drinks to be used as a beverage was made a crime,—put upon a level with robbery or arson; and the party charged therewith was deprived of certain rights and privileges which under the common law are extended to all petits suspected and arraigned for other crimes. The suggestions of men with whom prudence was deemed a part of wisdom, and essential to the success of principle, were discarded. Motions made in the Senate to amend the law in order to avoid foreseen and apprehended obstacles to its practical enforcement, were defeated and their movers stigmatized as suspected foes. The bill was signed by the Governor and became a law.

Those who have a memory for matters of so little public interest will recollect that the TIMES, which had steadily favored the trial of the experiment of prohibition, upon the enactment of this law expressed its fears and regrets that, by its provisions, the experiment was not to be fairly or wisely made; that, where prudence was required it had been contemned; that the ground taken towards that public sentiment upon which the law must depend for its vitality, was one of scorn and defiance; that the details of the law were needlessly and dangerously rigorous; that it was certain to be pronounced unconstitutional by many of the local tribunals which would be first called upon to enforce it, while it was highly probable that this adverse judgment would be affirmed by the Court of last resort; and that the law would thus be nullied, the Temperance sentiment of the State discouraged, and the progress of the cause checked and retarded by the very measures taken for its advancement. How these suggestions were received by the framers and friends of the law, it is not necessary to recount. How they have been vindicated by the result, is open now to the observation of all.

When the law took effect, July 4, 1855, it rested for its vitality upon the local sentiment of each section. In the rural districts it was generally endorsed. In large towns it met with hostility; in this City opinions were at once procured from the legal authorities, and acted upon by the Executive, which nullified the law at the outset;—and, as a general thing, where the law was not needed, it was enforced, and where it was needed, it became a dead letter. Both friends and enemies finally acquiesced quietly the decision of the Court of Appeals;—and when that came it crushed out what little life was left in the law, and threw open the whole business of liquor dealing,—virtually repealing all the old license laws, and removing all restrictions and all fees. Last Winter the two branches of the Legislature differed as to the remedy:—the Assembly passed a license law,—the Senate a new Prohibitory law;—but, as neither House assented to the action of the other, both projects fell through, and the State is now without any law upon the subject.

What is likely to be done this Winter is only matter of conjecture. Experience, we doubt not, has modified the views of many who have been active in the cause hitherto, and led them to appreciate better the difficulties in the way of absolute prohibition. A gentleman at Albany is said to have demonstrated that the decision of the Court of Appeals does not amount to much, after all,—but the Tribune very fairly and forcibly calls upon him, if this is so, to secure the enforcement of the law which that decision overturned. The fact is, in such a matter as this mere technicalities are of very little moment. The grand thing demanded is a public sentiment,—general, diffusive and earnest, which shall sustain the law and exact its enforcement. It must not be the sentiment merely of a majority,—a determination on their part to execute the law without regard to the feelings, the sentiments or the interests of the minority of the community. Force,—whether physical or pecuniary,—can never accomplish the results desired. So great, so radical a change in the habits, interests and modes of thought of this community, as such a law proposes, can never be effected by the general acquiescence or even the general obedience of all classes. The right of the majority to enforce the law, with the sword, penalties and prisons, upon a resisting and complaining minority, would soon be regarded as persecution, and would beget sympathy in the minds of the majority them-[illegible] Well, the general sentiment of the country, therefore, will answer a Prohibitory law, it will be useless to enact one. No matter what technical constructions of the Constitution may permit, we forbid, it is useless and mischievous in such a community as ours to legislate against, or even greatly in advance of, public opinion.

[illegible]

What our Legislature ought to give us this Winter is as stringent a license law as possible,—one which will limit and restrict to the utmost attainable point the sale of intoxicating liquors, and at the same time secure to our town and county treasuries some funds to meet the expense of sustaining the paupers, and punishing the criminals, whom the traffic, under any circumstances, may and will inflict upon the community. Some restriction is certainly better than none. Even the most zealous advocate of Prohibition must concede that, in this, as in all other matters of practical life, half a loaf is better than no bread. Let us have such a law upon this subject as shall, without overleaping public opinion, educate and prepare it for something more advanced. This is all that can, under present circumstances, be expected—and, if wisely followed up, it will prove to be all that should be desired.

Suggestions for the Future from a Southern Republican.

During the recent canvass, as our readers may remember, we published several letters from Georgia, written by a slaveholder, who was nevertheless an ardent advocate of the election of Col. FRÉMONT, on the ground of opposition to the extension of Slavery. In a private letter received from him since the election, we find the following suggestions,—which we publish, not for the purpose of indorsing them, but merely for the consideration of the public:

ATLANTA, Ga., Sunday, Nov. 23, 1856.

'Tis true the hope of the best spirits in the land is deferred for a season, by the defeat of FRÉMONT. Yet we must not despair. I cannot help believing that occurrences in the next four years will be such as to wake up the true men of all sections and unite them in a successful opposition.

I incline to think that the next move must be one that is calculated to invite Southern coöperation. The fact is that the people of the Slave States, though largely non-slaveholders, are under the complete dominion of the Slavery interest. There can be no party organization here which exhibits the least hostility to that interest. No party can hope, for many years to come, to command majorities without the capital, influence, power and prestige of the class of slaveholders.

Is there any way to form a party that shall be just to the North and give a pledge to the South of a conservative policy as regards Slavery?

Let me assure you that this thing of Slavery extension is regarded at the South by the best minds as a mere humbug to unite the Slave States in the support of the present ruling party. The great body of the slaveholders are content with the present area of Slavery; especially are they not solicitous to extend Slavery to Northern latitudes.

I am not sure but the zeal of a large portion of the leaders of opinion at the North, in opposition to Slavery, has done harm to the Republican cause. The evils of Slavery in the abstract and in the States where it exists have been dwelt upon as if the question were the Abolition of Slavery.

However great an evil it may be to the white or negro race; however malignantly it may operate upon the prosperity and character of the nation, it is not pertinent to the present party issues to talk of these things any further than they are proper considerations for excluding Slavery from territory where it does not now exist. It is to be hoped that the friends of progress and refinement at the North will so apply their arguments as to show that their purpose is not political hostility to existing institutions at the South. It will not do for the sensitive owners of a property generally condemned by the opinion of mankind to feel that there are in the same party column with themselves men whose object is, not the overthrow of a common enemy, but the ruin of their comrades.

Let us for the future take human means to accomplish human ends.

We feel that our object is a noble one—the enlargement of human effort, and the purity of the Federal Administration. But this object must be reached by means which in their nature are less lofty than the object itself.

Pardon this impertinence and be assured that I am Yours truly.

LEAKING AT BUNG AND SPIGOT.—In urging his new line of steamships, Mr. DUDLEY MANN does not fail to remind us that Virginia was once the largest exporting State of the Union. In respect to one article, that pre-eminence still remains to it, and that article is man. Some sixty thousand negroes are yearly shipped away to a Southern market; and, if we may trust the estimates of Senator MASON, two or three thousand more ship themselves away to the North and Canada, preferring a mart where the commodity has a reasonable par value, and may be exchanged fairly against itself. A sound commercial economy might suggest that, with so heavy an outgo of slaves, every effort would be persevered in to retain the whole crop of free men. Not such, however, the policy of the Old Dominion. Last Summer, a very respectable land owner of Clarke County, by name UNDERWOOD, was exported to the North, very much against his will, and to the sad detriment of his worldly affairs. A month or two later, Norfolk resumed a little of its old energy as an exporting town, by shipping away one STANNARD, a merchant, to Connecticut. We now hear of a family named SHIFFLET, of Greenbrier County, receiving peremptory notice to depart—in fact, being exported without drawback or debenture.

Very obviously, a speedy end will be put to that exuberant prosperity upon which Governor WISE felicitates his constituents, if this exhaustive policy be pursued much longer. The last evidence of decline in a nation is the emigration, free or forced, of its men. No depletion can be more fatal; and unhappily the preposterous treatment of UNDERWOOD and other immigrants from the Free States, is already checking the very slight human importation that served partially to counter-balance the drain. In his zeal for Virginia interests, Colonel MANN might well direct attention to this very important one. It will be vastly to the benefit of the Old Dominion, and no loss to the rest of the world, if she keep all her mankind at home, Col. MANN and Gov. WISE not excepted.

Voting in Kansas.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

A constant reader of the TIMES wishes to know if a man who offered his vote at the late Kansas election for WHITFIELD was compelled, if challenged, to swear to the support of the Territorial laws before depositing his vote. J. C.

By the law of Kansas he would be compelled to swear to support the Constitution of the United States, the Fugitive Slave Laws of 1793 and 1850, and the Kansas and Nebraska bill. He is not required to swear to support the laws of the Territorial Legislature. As the Free-State men abstained from voting at the election referred to, nobody was probably challenged.

NOW READY:
PRESCOTT'S ROBERTSON'S CHARLES V.
HISTORY OF THE REIGN OF THE EMPEROR CHARLES THE FIFTH.
BY WM. ROBERTSON, D. D.,
With a continuation, giving an account of the Life of the Emperor after his Abdication.
BY WM. H. PRESCOTT.
In 3 vols. 8vo. With a fine portrait engraved from Titian. Uniform with "Ferdinand and Isabella," "Philip II," "Conquest of Mexico," &c., &c.
The life of the Emperor in the Convent of Juste was imperfectly known at the time when Robertson wrote. Mr. Prescott, in gathering materials from the royal archives of Simancas, for his History of the Reign of Philip II., obtained, at the same time, minute information concerning the last years of the royal recluse; and the work thus completed, fills a chasm in Spanish History, between the Reign of Ferdinand and Isabella, and that of Philip II.

This is unquestionably the handsomest, cheapest and most convenient edition of Moore ever offered to the public, either in England or America.

THE LIFE AND WORKS OF JOHN ADAMS,
SECOND PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES.
Edited by his grandson, Charles Francis Adams.
Ten vols., 8vo. $22 50. Volumes 1 and 10 just published.
From the Puritan Recorder.
A work for the statesman to read and study—a work especially suited to young men—a work with which we can well afford to identify our national reputation.
From the Philadelphia Bulletin.
One of the most valuable contributions yet made to American history.
From the Boston Transcript.
Such a contribution to American history we have not had before, except in the collections of the Writings of Washington and Jefferson. Probably in literary value and interest this will surpass them both.
From the North American Review.
A contribution to the materials of American history not second in importance and interest to any of the great publications with which it is most obviously to be compared.

THE PURITAN COMMONWEALTH.
A Historical Review of the Puritan Government in Massachusetts in its Civil and Ecclesiastical Relations, from its rise to the Abrogation of the First Charter. Together with some general reflections on the English Colonial Policy, and on the Character of Puritanism.
BY PETER OLIVER.
This work treats on the construction of the Puritan Commonwealth of Massachusetts, it failure to accomplish the end of all good government, in the preservation of good order and the prevention of immorality, it discusses the Puritan Church, its intolerance, as shown in the persecutions of the Familists, Quakers and Baptists, and its Missionary claims, as compared with those of the Church of England and the Church of Rome; it asserts the gradual degeneracy of the Puritans, after their separation from the great Catholic body, and lastly contains reflections on the English Colonial policy, and on the general character and tendencies of Puritanism.
In 1 vol. 8vo. Price $2 25.
A very remarkable book, which has already attracted much attention among the students of New-England History, and seems likely to give rise to an earnest and interesting controversy on the character and conduct of the Puritan forefathers.

DUER'S
CONSTITUTIONAL JURISPRUDENCE.
A Course of Lectures on the Constitutional Jurisprudence of the United States.
Delivered annually in Columbia College, New-York, by William Alexander Duer, LL.D., late President of that Institution.
The second edition, revised, enlarged, and adapted to professional as well as general use.
1 vol. 12mo. Price $1 75.
From the Knickerbocker.
Judge Duer, former President of Columbia College, by his studies as a lawyer, his experience as a politician, a legislator, and a member of the State Judiciary of New-York, was eminently qualified to exhibit the bearing of constitutional law. In a series of lectures originally delivered to the senior class of Columbia College, he has unfolded with brevity and with consummate skill the great principles of the Federal Constitution, tracing its working through the various branches of its legislative, executive, and judicial authority; its relations with States abroad, and its regulations within, among the several members of the Confederacy at home. Introductory to the whole is a sketch of the history of the Confederation down to the date of the present Constitution. An appendix supplies the text of several valuable documents, as the article of confederation, the Constitution, and, what is now of timely interest, the ordinance for the Government of the territory of the United States Northwest of the River Ohio. To render this political manual still more available, in addition to its table of contents, it has an admirable analysis of the entire subject of the work, exhibiting its strict unity and legal deduction, while a copious index distributes the numerous topics under appropriate heads, leaving nothing to be desired on the score of convenience and easy intelligibility.

STORY'S POEMS.
POEMS, BY WILLIAM W. STORY.
One vol. 12mo. Price $1.
From the Boston Transcript.
We have read these poems with great pleasure. They are not numerous, but they are all good. The author is an artist who has lived in Italy for some years, and his poems are flooded with the golden sunlight of Italian Summers. Castle Palo is the most finished and elegant poem in the volume. We like its story and its easy versification, its deep tenderness of feeling and the glowing beauty of its scenery. There is grace, delicacy and beauty in almost every page of this elegant volume, which is printed in a style rarely equaled in America.
From the Boston Traveller.
It is not often that eminent success is vouchsafed to one and the same individual in two spheres of art. We do not look to the sculptor for other poetry than that which the silent marble utters, nor to the poet for the statuesque other than it shall appear in the rounded harmony and fine symmetry of the true poem. Mr. Story, however, certainly gives eminent promise in either sphere. The products of his chisel have made him widely known, and have given him a good rank among young American sculptors. This volume will speak for his abilities as a poet, and will win him a rank not often accorded to an artist of another art.

STUDIES IN THE FIELD AND FOREST.
BY WILSON FLAGG.
"All that the genial ray of morning gilds
And all that echoes to the song of even."
1 vol. 12mo. Price $1.
From North American Review.
These papers indicate an artist's eye and a poet's susceptibility; careful observation of nature; and familiarity with the canons and models of constructive and ornamental art. Withal, they are written in a highly attractive style, marked by simplicity and naïveté, and adapting itself with easy grace to the theme in hand.
From the Salem Gazette.
The most exquisite descriptions of rural still life which our language has produced.

BEST HAIR DYE IN THE WORLD.—This is strong language, yet BOGLE'S ELECTRIC HAIR DYE (recently improved), was proven to be so by the Judges at the late Mechanics' Fair, held in Boston (among whom was Dr. Hayes, the eminent chemist and State Assayer,) who awarded it the PRIZE MEDAL AND DIPLOMA over the choicest HAIR DYES on exhibition from all parts of the Union. Its unparalleled superiority consists in: 1st—The ingredients are nourishing to the hair, not destructive, as others are. 2d—Does not stain nor hurt the skin. 3d—Is easily applied, and gives the hair any color required, from a delicate brown to a deep black, as natural as to appear marvelous. Manufactured, sold, and applied by WM. BOGLE, No. 277 Washington-st., Boston. Sold also in New-York by BARNES & PARKS, RUBRIGS, BERGMAN, BLAKE & CO., G. H. RING, A. B. & D. SANDS, Kilmer & Co., R. H. CARY & CO., F. C. WILLS, and by druggists generally.

YOU'LL WANT A MOUSTACHE BY NEXT Week (say) and may convince yourself of the wonderful virtues of Mrs. Lamont's Hair Restorative, and that it is the best article for the purpose ever offered. Sold by all druggists. Depot, 355 Broadway; SPELDING, No. 17 Tremont-row, Boston.

DRY GOODS.

TO THE LADIES OF NEW-YORK.
HIGHLY ATTRACTIVE SALE OF PARISIAN IMPORTATIONS.
ARTICLES DE VERTU,
NOUVEAUTIES,
BRIDAL ROBES AND FLOUNCINGS,
LACES AND EMBROIDERIES,
SILKS, SHAWLS AND RIBBONS,
COSTUMES,
INDIA CAMEL'S HAIR SHAWLS,
VELVET AND FUR-TRIMMED CLOAKS,
SORTIES DE BAL,
&c., &c., &c.
A French lady of refined taste, long resident at the Court of St. Petersburg, having selected an elegant and superb stock of goods for the above market, and circumstances of an unforeseen nature having transpired to compel her to alter this determination, she has been induced to bring them to New-York for sale, being informed that the cultivated and recherché tastes of the American ladies would insure in this City their immediate and profitable disposal.
The goods are at present in the Custom-House, and have been pronounced by the appraisers, and other celebrated judges who have been called on for an opinion, superior to anything of the kind ever imported into this country.
The subscriber, having made arrangements with the owner to effect the sale of this property, and having to that end especially set apart his spacious wholesale warerooms (being at this season of the year not wanted for his regular business,) begs to call the attention of the New-York public to the fact, and to assure them that so truly beautiful a collection of rare and costly gems of art and manufacture has never before been here exhibited.
They will be exposed at private sale on and after Thursday next, the 11th instant, and will afford an opportunity to any one desirous of making a valuable Christmas or New-Year's gift, rarely, if ever, equaled.
They are of the very latest Parisian mode, having left the Emporium of Fashion only in November. Their novelty and rarity may therefore be relied on; and as it is the intention of the owner to return to Europe at the earliest possible moment, their prompt distribution to the public is rendered imperative.
They consist in part of
Rich silk and other robes,
For promenade, dinner and bridal costume,
Elaborately adorned with gold, silver and coral embroideries,

[illegible] by Rev. R. H. Chavis, the subject being "Columbus." The lecturer was introduced to the large audience, who filled the body and galleries of the building, by G. W. Curtis, Esq., the "Howadji" who briefly addressed the assembly in behalf of the artistic corporation for whose benefit the lectures were designed. Mr. Chavis's lecture was not remarkably new, but (for all noble things it was just as good and a little better. The world, the lecturer said, will never have an age like that of Columbus again, for it can never again furnish such materials of novelty. It was strange how poets sometimes prophesied. Pulsor, in his Marbleic Magazine, written long before the discovery of America, prophesied the finding of the New World. The demon transporting him through the air, tells us that in the West, far off, he was.

"Man shall discover another hemisphere!"

Mr. Chavis could no allusion to the well-known lines of Bryant, in one of his plays, which are even more apposite, as being more remote. All that is said of the life and history of Columbus he dwelt on enthusiastically, but also reverently. One fault would lie with the great Genoese. He sent slaves to America, though even Ferdinand was staggered, and the noble Isabella ordered them to be brought back. Their Spanish majesties could accept the doctrine of loving souls by the sale de fe, but they were blind to the advantages of Slavery, which, as a soul-saving institution, was quite a modern idea, and effort of the boasted Christian civilization.

At the lecture-room at Clinton Hall, Astor-place, the fourth lecture of the course before the Mercantile Library Association was delivered by Rev. Dr. Winkle, his subject being "The Gentleman." Our readers, from frequent notices of that lecture, will know our opinion of it is highly favorable. "The Gentlemen," by the same lecturer, will form the subject of the next address before the same Society.

At Hope Chapel, last night, Ossian A. Brownson delivered a course of three lectures on the "Characteristics of Modern Civilization." The lecturer, in accordance his usual proclivities, seemed to give considerable attention to his audience, which was exceedingly small.

Among the lectures, we notice that a brief series of discourses are to be delivered this week, by Rev. Dr. Bethune, of Baltimore, for the benefit of the City Sunday School Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

Present to the Astor Library.

Last Friday the Astor Library received the very generous and valuable present of a copy of "The Publications of the British Commissioners of Patents." The publications make 131 volumes in royal octavo, and drawings make 187 volumes in folio. There are also 4 volumes of the Commissioners' Journal and 20 volumes of Indices. The following are the various kinds of indices furnished—a glance at which gives the reader some faint idea of the value of the work:

An alphabetical index of patents granted from 1617 to 1852, with supplementary indices for each year.

A subject-matter index for the same period, with a chronological index for the same period, and supplementary index for the same period, pointing out the office in which each enrolled specification of a patent may be consulted, the books in which decisions, law proceedings, and other subjects connected with inventions have been noticed, &c.

A separate alphabetical and subject-matter index of patents for fire-arms, projectiles, &c.

Fire Department.

The annual meeting of the Representatives of the Fire Department was held last evening at Firemen's Hall, Sixth-street, Thomas E. Stillwell, the President, in the chair. The Trustees of the Fire Department Fund submitted their annual report, from which it appears that the money contributed to the Fund from all sources for the past year was $34,024 55. During this year there had been expended $24,920 01, leaving a balance on hand of $9,112 54. The following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

President—John Mallerie.
Vice President—John Gillilen.
Secretary—Wm. A. Woodhull.
Treasurer—John S. Giles, and three Trustees.

☞ The Young Men's Republican General Committee give a festival and ball at the Academy of Music on Thursday evening, the 18th inst. The Committee have received assurances from many prominent Republicans of their approbation of this plan of uniting in one assemblage the Governors and statesmen of the land, with the distinguished orators and writers who have taken part in the late struggle for free principles. Gov. Fairchild and lady have accepted an invitation to be present—they say.

☞ At a meeting of the Tammany Society last evening, James M. Mayer, Esq., was elected Sachem to supply the vacancy made by the appointment of Daniel E. Delavan, former Sachem, as Grand Sachem. A Committee was also appointed to make arrangements for the ball on the 8th of January, commemorative of the taking of New-Orleans by General Jackson.

Coroner's Inquests.

THE DEAD BODY FOUND IN THE CELLAR IN READE-STREET—ITS IDENTIFICATION.

The body of the young man found Sunday morning dead in the cellar of the new building erecting at No. 59 Reade-street, has been identified as that of John Mills, a brother of Assemblyman Mills. An examination of the case was made yesterday by Coroner Gamble, but nothing was adduced to show that the deceased had been robbed or murdered. Drs. Kissam and Welsh made a post mortem examination, and found no injuries other than would result from a fall. It could not be shown that the deceased had any money in his possession on the night of his death, and it was known that he had not had much recently. The Coroner's Jury rendered the following verdict:

"That John Mills came to his death by a fall into the sub-cellar of the building No. 59 Reade-street, in process of erection, the openings into said area having been left uncovered in a state most dangerous to passers by, and showing culpable negligence on the part of those persons having charge of the same, which is deserving of severe censure."

Deceased was a single man, aged 28, and a native of Newark, N. J. His body was given to his friends for interment.

We have learned some facts touching the deceased that were not brought forward fully at the Coroner's Inquest. One who was present assures us that he (the deceased) came into Gossmann's saloon in Chatham-street about 2 o'clock Sunday morning, in a state of intoxication. He joined freely in conversation with those present, and made some boasts as to his private attachments. A person described as "the little Irish boy, Jim," who had entered the saloon with or immediately after Mills, remarked: "You fight! why, you couldn't whip a child." Mills rejoined, and some high and threatening words ensued between the parties. "Jim" walked away towards the street door, and deceased followed after, taking off his coat as he followed, as though challenging to a fight. The Irish boy, Jim, thereupon turned round, taking off his hat, seized deceased and "bucked" him several times. Mills struck not a blow, and when released from the grasp of Jim went up to the lodging apartment of the house, as if to avoid further collision. The boy Jim left the premises soon after. Mills remained on the upper floor for some time, and then left the house. He returned again soon afterwards, when he was advised not to remain, as the boy "Jim" was somewhere about, and if he met him again he would be sure of a beating.

Deceased then left, and was observed to cross the Park.

In about ten minutes after, the boy Jim appeared in Chatham-street.

Nothing further was thought of the matter until the recognition of the body found in Reade-street as that of Mr. Mills.

These facts may be important, and may not be. Mr. Mills may have been killed by falling down the aperture, or he may have been murdered by being pushed into it.—The Coroner's Jury were unable to say which.

We think the matter worthy of further investigation.

A gentleman, who knew Mr. Mills intimately, assures us that the deceased was a man who seldom indulged in liquor. He was on board the steamer Philadelphia, when so much sickness was on board, and was brought by her to this port sick of Chagres Fever, from which he did not recover entirely for a year. A very little liquor affected him very much, and knowing this, he was generally quite abstemious. Our informant having examined the trap, is satisfied that the coarsest man might have stumbled into it, and thinks that he did so. The only point that makes against this is the fact that the pocket-book of deceased, torn in pieces, and his handkerchief, were found on the sidewalk. If there was no murder in the case, there certainly was most gross carelessness in leaving the sidewalk in such condition.

DEATH FROM BURNS.

Coroner Mills held an inquest yesterday, at Fourth-avenue and Twenty-third-street, on the body of James Trafton, a child two years and six months old, who died on Sunday. The evidence showed that the clothes of the child caught fire from coming in contact with the stove. The mother was temporarily absent from the room, hearing the child's screams. On ex-

[illegible]

An inquest was held also yesterday by Coroner Gamble, in the Second-ward, on the body of Mr. Margaret Long, who died on Sunday from falling down a flight of stairs. The deceased was an intemperate person, and was intoxicated at the time of the accident. She was allowed to remain on the floor where she fell for several hours after the accident, as those going by supposed she was only drunk. A medical examination showed that death was caused by concussion of the brain, caused by falling in attempting to go up stairs. The deceased was thirty years of age and a native of Ireland.

Fires.

FIRE IN SEVENTH-AVENUE.

About 7 o'clock last evening, a fire broke out in the camphene and burning-fluid establishment of Catharine McDonald, No. 125 Seventh-avenue. The entire stock of the store was destroyed, and the furniture of a back room adjoining was considerably damaged by water. The loss on the stock was $600, which was covered by insurance in the Hope Insurance Company. The second story occupied by Conrad Ehl, sustained damage to the furniture in the front room to the amount of $100, with no insurance. The building belongs to Mrs. McDonald, and was damaged about $400—covered by insurance. It was stated that a drunken man upset a bottle of burning fluid, and thus set fire to the store.

FIRE ON SHIPBOARD.

Early yesterday morning a fire was discovered on board the London packet ship Quickstep, lying at Pier No. 11 East River, foot of Pike-street. The fire originated from the stove-pipe running through the sky-light, and was extinguished with but trifling loss.

Run Over by a City Railroad Car.

Jacob Secor was run over yesterday afternoon by one of the Second-Avenue Railroad cars, on the corner of Dover and South streets. Removed to the City Hospital.

Fire in One Hundred and Twenty-fifth-street.

At 11½ o'clock yesterday morning a fire broke out in the stables of Thomas Lacy, in One Hundred and Twenty-fifth-street, between Tenth and Eleventh avenues. Damage, $300; covered by insurance.

☞ A man named Wm. Kelly, while attempting to board a schooner lying at the foot of Houston-street, East River River, about 1 o'clock Monday morning, fell into the dock. After a great struggle he got hold of a log of the pier and held on with his body in the cold water until three policemen arrived and rescued him. He was nearly exhausted but soon recovered under treatment, and was sent to his home in Brooklyn.

☞ The Teachers' Association met last evening at their rooms in Educational Hall, and passed resolutions concerning the death of their associate Wm. H. Ranson, Esq., late Principal of Public School No. 7. The attendance was large and the occasion of much interest.

N. Y. AND E. R. R. R., OFFICE GENERAL SUP'T, NEW-YORK, June 14, 1856.

EDWARD H. DIXON, M. D., Editor of the Scalpel—DEAR SIR: Permit me to return you my sincere thanks for the thorough cure of the most annoying affections with which an active man could be harassed, viz.: Piles.

I had felt for many years their gradual incursion, and some three years since I was operated upon by the old method of ligature and incision; this, however, only afforded a temporary relief; the violence of the disease increased to such an extent that it became evident that I must either be relieved or abandon the arduous duties of my profession. Fortunately, in a moment of doubt, I yielded to my curiosity to learn the method adopted by you to eradicate the disease without an operation. I had been convinced of its impossibility by many trials of remedies, and not even your position as editor of a journal, whose candid teachings had for many years been my delight, gave me any conviction of its truth. But I am now convinced, by a thorough cure and complete renovation of my constitution, that by your method, comparatively painless, and with but little or no detention from active business, the most aggravated cases of this disease may be removed.

I am so desirous that all thus afflicted may experience similar benefit, that I could not forbear sending you this letter, as I know the unwillingness of people to lend any credence to such assurances as are usually published.

I trust, however, that the numerous cases of cures effected by you upon persons extensively known in the community may remove all doubt and enable you to extend the benefit to all sufferers.

Your obedient servant,
D. C. McCALLUM.

Letters requesting advice must contain a fee of $5. Dr. D. also refers to N. G. Bradford, Esq., cashier Bowery Bank; H. Ford, Esq., Storage, Brooklyn, L. I.; John P. Hays, Harmer, Hays & Co., Beekman-street.

Owing to the great pressure of business on account of the approaching Holidays, Gurney, the Photographist, has secured the services of several talented artists, in addition to his own corps of Parisian artists, and feels confident that all and every one can be accommodated with less delay, owing to his numerous facilities, than at any other establishment. Particular attention is called to his life-size Photographs on canvass, colored in oil, which are said to be "Perfect gems of Art," and for which he received the first premium a gold medal at the late Fair of the American Institute. LONG ISLAND.

Proposed new Ferry between Brooklyn and New-York.

At a meeting of the Brooklyn Board of Aldermen last evening, the series of resolutions annexed, were presented by Alderman Huxley, and after considerable discussion adopted by a vote of 26 ayes to 2 nays—Aldermen Kalbfleisch and Wardwell alone voting in the negative:

Resolved, That a lease of the land and slip at the foot of Fulton-street, on the East River, belonging to the city, be given to John A. Dayton and his associates for the term of ten years, upon the following conditions:

1. That said Dayton and his associates shall within one year from the date of said lease, furnish the necessary boats and put in complete operation a ferry from said slip to some convenient landing in the City of New-York.

2. That no higher rates of ferriage shall be charged during the period of said lease than the lowest rates ever heretofore charged by the Union Ferry Company, viz., one cent for each foot passenger, and 36 per hundred for cart tickets, with the privilege of commutation.

Resolved, That the said lease shall never be disposed of to the Union Ferry Company, and said slip and piers shall be used during the period of said lease for ferry purposes, and for none other.

Resolved, That the said Ferry, during the period of said lease, shall be continued and managed in a safe and convenient manner, with such number of boats as may be necessary to meet the wants of the public.

Resolved, That the said Dayton and associates shall erect commodious ferry-houses, piers and other necessary appurtenances, at the foot of Fulton-street, suitable for the purpose of such ferry; but, in such manner as not to interfere with the public travel of the street.

Resolved, That upon the non-compliance of the said Dayton and his associates with any of the foregoing conditions, the said lease, and the grant upon which the same is founded, shall become and be wholly void, revoked, and of no effect.

Provision to be made in said lease for a renewal thereof at the expiration of the time for which it is granted, or for a compensation for the improvements made upon the property of the City upon equitable terms.

These resolutions were based upon a petition signed by some 500 citizens urging the Common Council to accept the proposition of Mr. Dayton.

Children's Aid Society.

The Brooklyn authorities have granted the free use of a room in the basement of the City Hall as an office for the Children's Aid Society, to cooperate with the Society already organized in New-York City.

☞ If a man sends down a box of raisins, a box of oranges, a drum of figs, or a package of anything else eatable into the country by the Long Island Railroad, it is always expected that he will lose from one-eighth to one-fourth by its being broken open and stolen on the route. If our uncle sends us a barrel of potatoes, we should marvel very largely if half a bushel of them were not pilfered before entering the depôt at Brooklyn. So large has this nuisance grown, that it is thought the railroad loses thousands of dollars worth of freight because farmers are not willing to be robbed—without being consulted first. Is there no way of stopping it? Is it the freight-master's fault? Then let the Company slap him into the County jail till he learns better. But it is more likely to be the other employes on the road—then please Messrs. Directors to fetch them up with a round turn. Or, still more likely it is the work of the loafers who ride in the freight cars under the pretence of smoking there, and keep light fingers employed while they smoke. Let such be pitched incontinently out of the door. Their carcases would usefully manure the Long Island plains, and raise magnificent corn.

☞ The United States steam propeller Niagara, went into the Dry Dock on the 24th of November, since then the workmen have been to work chiefly on her machinery. About one hundred men are employed on her; all the bearings for the propeller have been fitted, and the connections of the engines and boilers are nearly completed. The lower parts of the smoke-pipes are up; they are now putting down the pivots for the guns, finishing the hammock rails and coal bunkers. They expect to be able to put steam on her by the 1st of January.

The Poor.

A Society, called the Brooklyn City Missionary and Relief Association, has organized in the Eastern District of Brooklyn. Sunday evening last George H. Andrews, Esq., was elected President, and Wm. G. Dunn Vice-President; L. P. Hubbard, Secretary.

A similar society to this was in existence a few years ago, but from some cause or other died out.

The City Missionary, Rev. Mr. Johnson, stated the result of his labors during the past year. He has visited over 10,000 poor persons; nearly 1,000 of the sick; had attended 230 funerals; preached 236 sermons; held 146 religious meetings; witnessed 25 conversions; given away 56 Bibles; induced 120 persons to attend Church; 112 children to attend Sabbath Schools, and 50 to the Public Schools; found employment for 160 persons, and induced 13 to sign the Temperance pledge.

The ladies associated with the City Missionary had circulated 47,770 tracts; induced 90 persons to attend Church; 250 to Sabbath Schools, and 50 to Public Schools.

Fire in Greenport.

The barn of the Wyandank House, at Greenport, Long Island, was burned down on Sunday night. There was a good deal of hay and grain in it and three horses, all which were destroyed. The fire broke out at 10½ o'clock. Whether it was the work of an incendiary or not, was not known. The barn was insured.

Slave Insurrections.

EXCITING RUMORS—LYNCH LAW—VIGILANCE COMMITTEES FORMED, &c.

Correspondence of the Philadelphia North American.

LOUISVILLE, Saturday, Dec. 6—Evening.

A report has reached the city that the negroes in southern Kentucky had broken out in rebellion, and that a general insurrection was feared. They had commenced an attack upon the Iron Works, and Vigilance Committees had been formed in Lafayette and Hopkinsville for the purpose of taking prompt action in the matter.

From the Somerville (Tenn.) Star, Nov. 29.

Some weeks ago, during the insurrection excitement, we announced that twenty-three negroes had been incarcerated by the Sheriff. Afterwards, upon trial of habeas corpus, seventeen of them were taken out, whipped and taken home, and the remaining six were detained for trial. On last Monday, these were brought out and tried before a regular impanneled Jury and three Justices, who ordered that five of them should be whipped four times in two weeks, thirty-nine lashes each time, and, as a further punishment, that they should stand in the pillory four times—an hour each time. The sixth one being an older man than the others, and for other considerations also, received but ten lashes.

From the Franklin (La.) Journal, Nov. 27.

The negroes arraigned in the parish of St. Martin, supposed to have been connected with an insurrectionary plot in that parish, have all been acquitted, except a free boy who is now in jail. There were several white men, whom it was supposed had acted in concert with them, for whom a warrant was issued; and the Deputy-Sheriff of the parish came to this place on Saturday evening last, and, accompanied by a posse, went in search of the fugitives, and below here, nearly opposite Patterssville, took three of them from a flat-boat—on their way, we understand, to the Invasion of the Railroad. [illegible] remember—occupied a very conspicuous place in the movement of insurrection, having furnished the negroes with ammunition and arms. The free boy, and at least one of the white men, will suffer deeply for the part taken in the matter; and the Mr. Cammoneck who bears so unenviable a reputation in this section, for his outrageous conduct while residing here, should be very summarily dealt with. He is a very dangerous character, and has, no doubt, done much to aggravate the present feeling among the colored population.

NEGRO INSURRECTIONS.

From the Missouri Democrat, Dec. 4.

For the past month the journals from different Southern States have been filled with numberless alarms respecting contemplated risings of the negro population. In Tennessee, in Missouri, in Virginia, and in Alabama, so imminent has been deemed the danger, that the most severe measures have been adopted to prevent their congregating or visiting after night, to suppress their customary attendance at neighborhood preachings, and to keep a vigilant watch upon all their movements, by an efficient patrolling system. This is assuredly a most lamentable condition for the Slave States, for nothing causes such terror upon the plantations as the bare suspicion of one of these insurrections.

In calling attention to the frequency and increase of the reported plots on the part of the slave population within the past year, we design not so much to speak of the measures which have been found necessary, for their repression, as to point to one great cause which has more than all else encouraged and instigated them, and that is the baneful agitation of this Slavery question by every demagogue in the Slave States, who wishes to acquire transient notoriety. In Missouri, especially, have we felt the effects of this Slavery agitation and Slavery extension policy upon the part of the nullification faction, who have sought to float into power and office by continually exciting the passions of men, and provoking discussion in regard to this theme; and we venture to assert that in consequence thereof more slaves have been induced to escape from their masters, more desperate resolutions have been put into their heads, and more general insecurity entailed upon that species of property within the past year, than during any five years preceding. Slaveholders are but now beginning to reap baneful consequences of the audience which has been granted of late to those debased politicians, whose only stock in trade was Slavery propagandism. The ferment excited in the minds of the masters soon extended itself to the slaves—for all who have lived in slaveholding communities well know how eagerly every scrap of parlor conversation, every excited harangue on the stump, or loud-toned dispute in the streets, is treasured up by the negro, and made the burden of kitchen comment during the hours of the night. If no other evil had befallen the people of Missouri, and especially the slaveholding population, this alone would be sufficient ground to induce them to banish these pestiferous politicians from their regard, and visit upon them the full weight of their censure and condemnation. No other means presents itself of speedily giving peace to the community, security to the country domicil, and elevation to the character of the State, as the utter repudiation of the Archisons and Stringfellows, and all others of that kidney, who have disgraced our Commonwealth with impunity in the past, and who would lead our people into still more dangerous straits in the future.

MONDAY, Dec. 8—P. M.

The Official Averages of the Banks in the City of New-York for the week ending Saturday last, Dec. 6, the details of which are advertised on another page of this paper, present, in the aggregate the following changes from the previous weekly statement of Saturday, Nov. 29:

Increase in Loans	$1,243,997
Increase in Specie	143,518
Increase in Circulation	61,146
Increase in Undrawn Deposits	1,299,030

The increase in Specie is less than was anticipated. The banks in the interior have made themselves stronger in New-York, by collections falling in from produce bills, as will be seen from the increased line of undrawn deposits. This checks the use of Gold this way and in the West, while a [illegible]

In regard to the consular case noticed the other day, we conclude from all that we hear from the authorities at Washington, that Foreign Consuls, resident here as merchants, have the privilege of electing to sue in the Federal Courts exclusively, and to demur to being sued in the State Courts. But this is in the nature of a privilege only. It is no immunity so far as the local laws are concerned, since these are recognized by the Federal Courts on all questions not inconsistent with the Federal laws, nor connected with admiralty jurisdiction. Our Washington correspondent infers that this is no higher privilege than that of any non-resident citizen, bringing suit in the Federal Court against a resident of New-York. Yet there is a difference, and a wide one; all the difference between the privileges of a plaintiff and defendant in any legal case. The plaintiff living in New-
